Job Description

Tulane University School of Medicine seeks an academic leader to serve as Chair of the Pathology Department. The Department has a diverse and growing clinical practice providing services to the Tulane University Hospitals and Clinics. The Department's research endeavors currently focus on both basic and translational science. The Department has a fully accredited Pathology Residency Program and is integrally linked to the School of Medicine's teaching mission at multiple levels.

Ideally, candidates should have an outstanding track record of funding and well published research with a national/international reputation. The successful candidate is expected to lead the Department's goal of an expanded research effort and to synergize with clinical and translational investigators in the broader Tulane University environment. The candidate should have experience in leadership and administration and be adept at communicating with a broad
