Posting Detail Information

Position Summary

The Jacobs School of Medicine and Biomedical Sciences (JSMBS), Department of Medicine is currently seeking qualified candidates for Clinical Cardiac Electrophysiology (EP) at the Assistant, Associate, or Full Professor ranks (commensurate with experience and credentials).

The ideal candidate will have:

- Strong interest and expertise in clinical inpatient and outpatient electrophysiology, including implantable device follow-up
 - Proficiency in the implantation of cardiac rhythm devices, including pacemakers, ICDs and CRT devices and conduction system pacing
 - Expertise in the performance of advanced cardiac ablation procedures
- The incumbent will be expected to conduct clinical research; provide patient care; teach fellows, residents, and medical students; and perform public and University service. Excellent teaching is an essential criterion for appointment to this position.

There is the potential to have clinical duties at both the Buffalo General Medical Center/Gates Vascular Institute as well as the Western New York VA Medical Center.

About The University at Buffalo

The University at Buffalo (UB) is a research-intensive institution, the largest and most comprehensive of the campuses of the State University of New York (SUNY) with over 30,000 students and full-time 1,600 faculty.
